Both of them also had negative attitudes about ticket-redemption arcades such as Chuck E. Cheese and Dave & Busters, which have customers play games for tickets that they can trade in for prizes.

"You spend a lot of money to win small prizes," O'Malley said, adding that he does not like the card-swiping system.

O'Malley said the system hides the price of the games from the customer. He said Star Worlds will always be a coin-operated arcade.

"A lot of arcades are going to the swipe cards or different formats," O'Malley said. "We'll never go off of using tokens or coins. The machines are coin-operated; to me, that's how they should be operated."
